DEGREES OF DINECT LEGISLATION

Direct legislation, like everything else, has its degrees. The mil dest is the direct election by the person ave its cause. Spell its cause in of public officers, and this is subdivided into whether this or that officer shall be elected. This degree will only be perfect when every officer from President down to postmaster is elected by the people. The next degree is that when the representatives of the law-making department pass a law the people have n right to have the matter referred to them for direct approval or disappreval by direct vote. There is material or rather radical weakness in this degree unless mnother degree is entered. The weakness is that the people would never have a chance to vote for laws other than such as their so-called representative should originate. This, you see, Those who are afraid of cating would put the origin of law in the middleman and not ln the people. at the bottem or as the origin of from anything we cat.
